How Watch Cases are Made.
Imitation always follows a successful trade, and imitation is one of the best means of real honest merit; and thus it is that the James Ross Gold Watch Case has many imitators. Buyers can always tell the genuine by the trade-mark of a crown, from which is suspended a pair of scales. Be sure both crown and scales are stamped in the cap of the watch case. Jewelers are very cautious about engraving an article unless they not only know it is good, but that the character of the manufacturer is such that the quality of the goods will be kept fully up to standard.

WILLIAMSON, PA., Feb. 12, 1885.
The James Ross Gold Watch Case goes like hot cakes. Each one I sell sells another. Don't need to recommend them; they sell themselves. One of my customers has had a James Ross Gold Watch Case for 20 years, and it is as good as new. With this I do not hesitate to give my own guarantee, on exactly the same with the new and improved cases, which I am now manufacturing. JAMES T. LITTLE, Jeweler.

THE NEW SILK INDUSTRY.

The Result of the Competition for the Silk Culture Premiums.

From Philadelphia Inquirer, May 2, 1884.
The chief attraction at the silk culture exhibition at Horticultural Hall last night was the awarding of premiums by Strawbridge & Clothier for the best silk cocoons raised in the United States during 1883. The premiums were awarded on the basis of the quality and quantity of reeled silk yielded by each 100 cocoons. There were seventy-seven entries from twenty-seven States for the premiums, which amounted to $500. Mr. Clarkson Clothier in awarding the premiums, said:

I come forward this evening to announce the award of the third annual premiums offered by Strawbridge & Clothier to the silk culturists of the United States through the Woman's Silk Culture Association. On the first occasion, the number of contestants was twenty-six, from four States; on the second occasion the number was thirty-three, from eleven States; this year we have seventy-seven competitors, from twenty-seven States.

It is but fair to assume that the growth of silk culture is to be measured by these figures, and the astonishing development of this industry in the last three years is, indeed, wonderful. From all parts of the country comes assuring sounds of encouragement.

The industry has developed wonderfully in California, to which State the first premium was awarded last year, and in the South and East many are taking hold of the work. The fact being established that cocoons can be produced in paying quantities the problem became how to have these reeled in sufficient quantities to keep pace with the supply, there being no steam filatures in this section of the country and the hand reels used here being inadequate to the increased task. To develop this important feature of the industry the firm of Strawbridge & Clothier brought to this city a foreign steam reel which is now running successfully in this hall. By this time the continuous development of the silk from the worm through the successive stages of the cocoon, the reeled silk and the woven fabric becomes a matter of assured fact, and we see that silk culture, which needs only time to become a great national industry is successfully being illustrated in all its stages in this country at the present.

This is a state of affairs that is especially gratifying to every citizen, and while we measure the results thus far attained, it must not be forgotten that the fostering care and patient work of the members of the Woman's Silk Culture Association the result is largely due. Let us remember this, and in thus honoring these ladies whose far-sighted wisdom has foreseen these results, and whose well-directed energies have produced them, we shall be but giving "honor to whom honor is due."

First premium of $100, to Miss E. Woolston, Pemberton, N. J.

Second premium of $75, to Messrs Rienz & Mantz, San Jose, Cal.

Third premium, of $65, to Mrs. A. H. Williams, Riverton, N. J.

Fourth premium of $60, to Miss Anna M. Mantz, San Jose, Cal.

Fifth premium, of $50, to Miss Clara S. Lewis, Virgil City, Mo.

Sixth premium, of $50, to Mrs. George Derr, Germantown, city.

Seventh premium, of $40, to Mrs. W. Hayes, Chester, Pa.

Eighth premium, of $30, to Mrs. Augustoria, Philadelphia.

Ninth premium, of $25, to Mrs. Anna Husted, Liberty, Ind.

Tenth premium, of $10, to Miss M. B. Lowers, Portsmouth, Ohio.

The association has prepared a memorial to Congress indorsing the act providing for the creation of a silk culture bureau and establishing silk culture stations under the direction of the National Government.

"Not at all; pride must be fostered, if times are ever so hard; but I believe I can see a way to effect quite a saving in another direction; please stop my—" tea, coffee and needless and unhealthy luxuries? "No, no, not these. I cannot think of that sacrifice; I must think of something else. Ah! I have it now. My paper costs me $1.3 cents a month; one dollar a year; I must save that. Please stop my paper. That will carry me through the panic easily. I believe in retrenchment and economy, especially in brains."—Exchange.

How the Young Grants Live.

New York World.
Frederick Grant is a young man of stout build and florid complexion, about 35 years old, and bears a strong likeness to his father, ex-President Grant. He was educated at West Point and served in the regular army, chiefly out west, for some years, reaching the rank of colonel. Soon after his marriage to Miss Honore of Chicago, a sister-in-law of Potter Palmer, some five years ago, he resigned his commission and taking up his residence in New York, went into business. He and his wife have lived very luxuriously, and have entertained considerably, giving many handsome dinner parties.

Ulysses Grant, jr., is the second son of the ex-President, and is about 32 years old. He studied law and was for some years connected with the firm of Work, Davies, McNamee & Hilton. He left soon after his marriage with a wealthy western girl some three years ago. It has always been supposed that his marriage brought him sufficient increase of fortune to enable him to abandon the law and become partner in the firm of Grant & Ward. He is rather short in build, of florid complexion like his brother and wears a becoming brown mustache. Before his marriage he was very fond of society, but since then has lived rather quietly, although he and his wife have given several handsome dinners and entertainments.

Jesse Grant is about twenty seven years old and has always been considered General Grant's and his wife's favorite son. He resembles his brothers in general appearance, but is slighter and much younger looking. General Grant was very desirous of having him enter the suspended firm, but his other sons objected, not thinking that Jesse had sufficient business experience. He resides with his parents at No. 3 East Sixty-sixth street, and is a member of the Lotus Club.

The English Editorial Writer.

The Aakansaw Traveler says: This country will not be a success until English editorial writers pay more attention to American politics. A staff correspondent of one of the great London dailies visited this country some time ago, and while in Arkansas sent the following letter to his journal: "Arkansas is situated between Memphis and San Francisco. Its climate is mild in winter, but in summer, I am told by an old inhabitant, is extremely cold. The Governor of this state receives $800,000 a year, which he spends mainly for the entertainment of his friends. I am much concerned in American politics, and never tire of studying the situation. At the present writing the country is much stirred up about President Dorsey. He went out on his sheep ranch somewhere in Cleveland and has not been heard of since. Should he never be found, Vice-President Sam Tilden will be knighted in his place."

General Butler's Generous Mood.

Boston Interview.
"We of the north might become reconciled very soon to admitting the poor disabled southern soldier who fought honestly for his belief by pensioning him sufficiently to relieve him from want, especially as the tax upon whisky and tobacco falls largely upon the southern section of the country."

A CHAT WITH A DIVER.

Killing Crabs and Feeding Them to the Fish—Watching the Pump and Bubbles.

From the New York Mail and Express.
"To be sure," said a submarine diver, "when a man is under water he depends on some one else than himself for safety. I only have the space around the helmet in which to breathe and if there wasn't fresh air to be had I'd very soon smother to death."

"Then you depend on the man who pumps the air down through the rubber tube?"

"No; I don't depend on him. Sometimes it's a boy who does it. I depend on the tender."

"Who is the tender?"

"He is the man that bosses the job on top. He has his hand on the line that can haul me up all the time. He pays out whatever line or tube is necessary, and he watches the pump and the bubbles."

"What bubbles?"

"Why, the air I've been breathing. That goes out of a valve at the top of a head-piece and of course rises to the surface of the water. That's what makes the bubbles. If the tender doesn't see any more bubbles, he knows that something is wrong and pulls me up with his helpers as fast as he can. He does the same thing when I give him the signal by pulling on the line."

"Do you ever see any fish down under water?"

"Oh, yes; plenty of them. We do considerable work sometimes on these iron ore vessels. If one of them is sunk, and she isn't to deep, they try to raise her. In order to do that they have to take out the cargo, because she would be too heavy to raise with it in her. Part of the load is generally on deck, and that's where I have the best chance to see the fish. They lower down a bucket about as big as a half barrel, and I pick the chunks of ore and throw them in. Often when I raise a chunk I find a crab under it, and I just take a chunk and smash him. I throw them all in to a little pile, and by and by when I get tired (you know everybody gets tired working like that) I sit down and feed the fish with them."

"Do they take them from you?"

"You bet; only I mustn't try to catch one, or he won't come back again?"

"Did you ever catch a fish this way?"

"No. I've had them in my hands lots of times, but I couldn't hold on to them. They're too slippery in the water."

Tell Your Mothers, Girls.

We wonder how many young girls tell their mothers everything. Not those "young ladies, who going to and from school?" smile, bow, and exchange notes and pictures with young men, who make fun of them, and would make their cheeks burn with shame if they heard it. All this, most credulous and romantic young ladies, they will do although they will gaze at your fresh young face admiringly, and send or give you verses or bouquets. No matter what other girls do, don't you do it. School flirtation may end disastrously as many a foolish, wretched young girl could tell you. Your yearning for some one to love you is a great need of every woman's heart. But there is a time for everything. Don't let the bloom and freshness of your heart be brushed off in any silly flirtation. Render yourself truly intelligent. And above all, tell your mother everything. Never be ashamed to tell her, who should be your best friend and confidant in all you think and tell. It is strange that young girls will tell every person before "mother," that which it is most important that she should know. It is that indifferent persons should know more about her fair young daughters than she does herself.—Exchange.
